Description

We have moved logic for scrubbing of notifiers to the datastore and introduced pair interface functions with and without scrubbing.

NOTE: for more information, please check the related ticket.

Checklist

- ☒ Investigated and inspected CI test results
- ☒ Unit test and regression tests added
- ☐ Evaluated and added CHANGELOG entry if required - not relevant
- ☐ Determined and documented upgrade steps - not relevant
- ☐ Documented user facing changes (create PR based on openshift/openshift-docs and merge into rhacs-docs) - not relevant

Testing Performed

1. Login into UI as admin
2. Create a test PagerDuty notifier
3. Get Bearer token from Browser

export TOKEN='<my-bearer-token>'

5. Run the curl command to get data over REST API

curl --request GET --insecure --url https://localhost:8000/v1/notifiers --header "Authorization: Bearer ${TOKEN}" --silent --output -
```

6. Run the `curl` command to get data over GraphQL

curl --request POST --insecure --url https://localhost:8000/api/graphql --header "Authorization: Bearer ${TOKEN}" --header 'Content-Type: application/json' --data '{"query": "{notifiers{pagerduty{apiKey}}}"}' --silent --output -

Skipping CI for Draft Pull Request.

If you want CI signal for your change, please convert it to an actual PR.

You can still manually trigger a test run with `/test all`

@mtodor: The following test failed, say `/retest` to rerun all failed tests or `/retest-required` to rerun all mandatory failed tests:

Test name	Commit	Details	Required	Rerun command
ci/prow/gke-qa-e2e-tests	cbf1164	link	false	/test gke-qa-e2e-tests

Makes sense, thanks for doing this!

Only suggestion is to update the PR title (and, therefore, commit message) to be more specific about the change being done (something like "Move notifier scrubbing to datastore layer") rather than just saying "refactor".
